

Bio

Austin Dunson serves as College Station ISD's director of communications, leading efforts to keep stakeholders informed, connected, and engaged. He manages the district's messaging, online presence, and media relations, while supporting campuses and departments in sharing their stories. Dunson also plays a key role in crisis communication, community engagement, and building trust through clear, timely, and transparent information.

Dunson has a decade of experience in public school communications. He joined CSISD in 2023 after serving in Cypress-Fairbanks ISD in several visual communications roles, including at the district's multi-purpose facility, the Berry Center. He has earned multiple Texas School Public Relations Association awards for his work promoting public schools through digital and visual storytelling. Dunson holds a Bachelor of Arts in Communications from Texas A&M University and resides in College Station with his wife and four children.
